

Rework Your Sentences

Provided by Jennie Wadsworth
General Studies Instructor, The Art Institute of California-Los Angeles

In classes where you return papers, essays or any written assignment, start by having the students write their own grammatically faulty sentences on the board.

Then do a quick analysis and have students rewrite those sentences together as a class, to kick off the session.

This is a simple idea, but it has been a good reminder about how powerful it is to have students critique and work from their own sentences.

